AISS Executive Team Briefs Top Member of Senate Leadership Senator Joseph Lieberman (D-CT) offers his encouragement and insight

June 18, 2007

Dateline, Englewood, NJ: AISS Co-Founder and Chairman Dr. M. Kazmir led a delegation of his executive team to Washington, DC to meet with Senator Joe Lieberman, a prominent member of the Senate leadership. Senator Lieberman chairs the influential Homeland Security and Government Affairs Committee and is considered among the most notable officials on matters of national security.

The group, which included AISS Co-Founder and President John Allison, Dean of Education Stephen Levy, and Vice-President for Media and Public Affairs Tony Sayegh, updated the senator on the progress and development of the flagship school, being built in Lahore, Pakistan. The group was also joined by Dr. James Ledyard, Assistant Vice-President of Advancement at The George Washington University, who has been discussing the prospects of developing a strategic partnership between AISS and the University.

“We are honored to have had the opportunity to meet with Senator Lieberman, who is among the most highly respected American statesmen” said Tony Sayegh, AISS Vice President for Media and Public Affairs. “His leadership on issues relating to foreign affairs, homeland security and educational policy are internationally regarded and we feel privileged to have had his insight for our project.”

Senator Lieberman expressed interest in the AISS mission of bringing American educational values and learning innovations to the children of Pakistan. Furthermore, he was encouraged by the vision that such a project represents and was hopeful that the school will make a positive contribution in shaping future relations between America and Pakistan.

“Senator Lieberman is clearly among the leaders of our nation and world who understand the importance of reaching children through educational initiatives at the earliest ages. Developing a cultural awareness and dialogue between the children of Pakistan and the United States will foster mutual understanding and respect among future generations, which is a primary goal of AISS”, Sayegh said.

The Senator concluded the meeting by saluting the visionary leadership of Dr. M. Kazmir and the diligent work being done by the members of the AISS team. He expressed tremendous hope that the reality of the AISS mission would be realized.
